

Remote + On-site Work Pulse Report

Report created April 1, 2020 based on 200 responses

Introduction

In these challenging times, looking after employees' health and well-being is a top priority for all business leaders. This survey is an opportunity for leaders to engage in a dialogue with their teams on important topics at this time and take actions to improve their experience.

The survey focuses on 2 key sections:

How employees are feeling overall - Results are broken down by key demographics (e.g., regions, teams, remote or on-site work) to help identify the different needs and experiences of your employee groups and help you to prioritize next steps.

Key focus areas for supporting and improving employee experiences - Survey questions are organized into critical dimensions of the work experience, which are the most relevant right now:

- Workforce support and balance - how employees are adapting to change, and whether they are getting the right levels of support and guidance to do their jobs
- Leadership - how leaders are connecting with employees' priorities and concerns
- Communications - how informed employees feel during this time of change
- Remote work enablement - identifying the support remote employees need to stay productive
- On-site safety - highlighting the immediate next steps to bolster on-site safety

Understanding your results and taking action:

- Prioritize actions - identify your lowest scoring questions
- Communicate results - share what you've learned with your people for alignment
- Close gaps between groups - get support to the groups that need it the most
- Look for innovative ideas and solutions - use the topics your people share about in their open comments to kick-start your next steps

Important information for how to read these survey results:

- There is no confidentiality threshold to display results. All questions with any responses will show in this report
- The survey was administered anonymously - participants self-selected their demographics within the survey
- Questions scores are reported by % favorability, which is the percent of respondents who selected Agree and Strongly Agree or similar 'top box' scale points

Responses - Demographic Breakdown

First, orient to the respondents shown in this report. The chart below helps paint a picture of how many employees may be in a new setting working remotely and how many may be still be working on-site. It's important to keep in mind the proportion of your organization that may be learning new rhythms and facing enablement challenges as you review the rest of the results.

Current Work Location

200 Responses

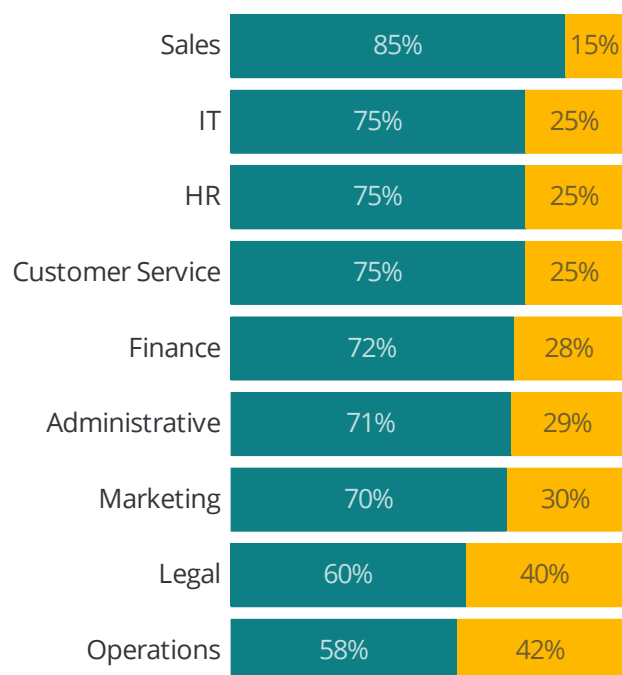

Note: The views below collapse all employees working remotely into a single group to highlight where employees in your organization are still working on-site.

Employee Work Location by Region

● Working Remotely ● Working On-Site

Work Location by Team

● Working Remotely ● Working On-Site

How employees are feeling

Employee's rated how they were feeling over the last week on a 1 (Terrible) to 7 (Great).

This result is an average (or mean score) for all employees giving you a single-number rating for the mood of your organization. Later in the report, you will be able to explore the factors that may be driving this result.

Overall Feeling Rating

This next break-out shows the distribution of feelings ratings across your entire population.

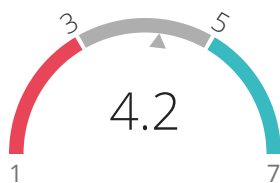

Consider whether your distribution resembles a bell-curve, with a peak in the middle and small sections on either end, a U-shaped distribution with large groups at either extreme and a valley in the middle, or is relatively flat without any strong peaks.

Overall Feeling Detail

Another level deeper into results, here we have the Overall Feeling score shown for those working remotely and those working on-site. Consider whether scores are similar at this level across these groups or diverge.

Overall Feeling Working Remotely

Overall Feeling Working On-site

Remember to explore your full set of comments for the contextual topics that are driving feelings.

These key words provide some direction.

Employee Feeling Deep Dive

Employee Feeling by Location

● 1 (Terrible) ● 2 ● 3 ● 4 (OK) ● 5 ● 6 ● 7 (Great)

Employee Feeling by Team

● 1 (Terrible) ● 2 ● 3 ● 4 (OK) ● 5 ● 6 ● 7 (Great)

Key Employee Experience drivers

Workforce Support & Balance

The first items in the survey check-in on how employees are adapting to the new COVID-19 situation and how they rate the level of support and information that has been provided to them.

Note: The items above have been shortened to display on this page of the report, to see the full item text and results distribution go to the "All Results" pages later in the report.

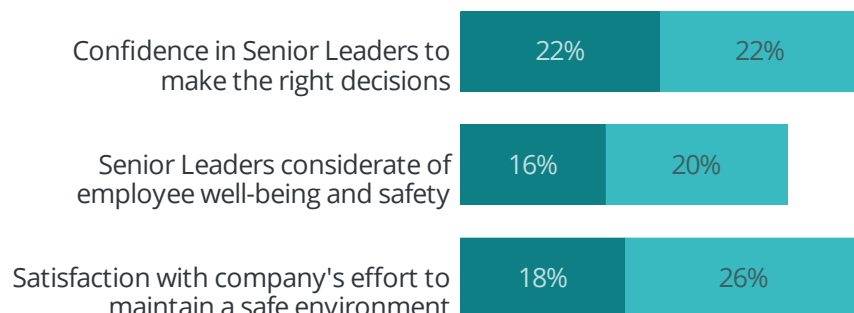

As priorities shift and needs change it is important to continuously rebalance workloads across your teams and communicate expectations and processes to find a new working pace.

What best describes your workload at the moment?

Leadership

Leaders must be more visible and accessible than ever in times of great change. Regular communication to employees helps both acknowledge concerns and align priorities and actions, providing the north star and clarifying roles.

- Extremely confident   ● Very confident   ● Extremely considerate   ● Moderately considerate
- Extremely satisfied   ● Moderately satisfied

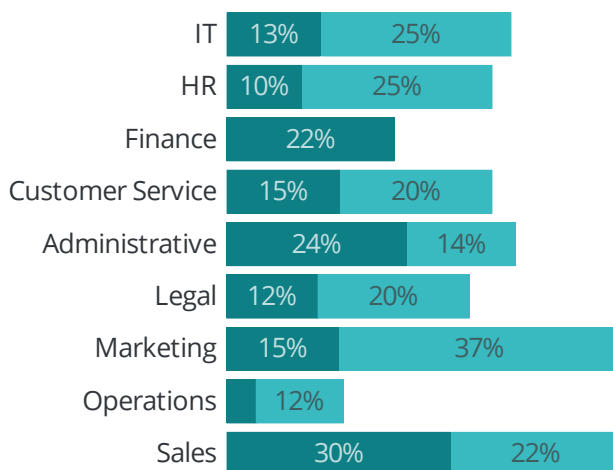

Note: The items above have been shortened to display on this page of the report, to see the full item text and results distribution go to the "All Results" pages later in the report.

Satisfaction with company's efforts to maintain a safe environment
by Locations

- Extremely satisfied   ● Moderately satisfied

Senior Leadership consideration of employee wellbeing and safety when making decisions
by Teams

- Extremely considerate   ● Moderately considerate

Communications

These questions provide insight into how well communications are landing with employees and how clear the actions that the company is taking to the frontlines of the workforce.

This feedback enables adjustments to communications frequency, tone, and style to best suit employee expectations.

Communications from the company have...

● Strongly agree ● Agree ● Extremely clear ● Very clear

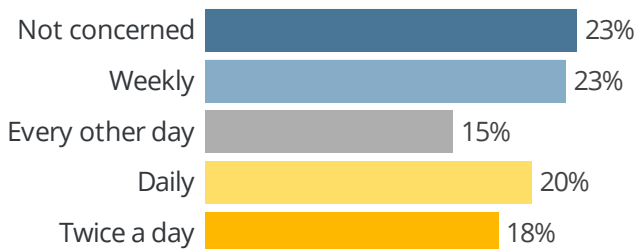

Note: The items above have been shortened to display on this page of the report, to see the full item text and results distribution go to the "All Results" pages later in the report.

Review the desired frequency of communications for your company overall and then contrast with remote and onsite workers. Employees new to working remotely may feel an absence of communication that usually comes to them informally when in the office. On-site workers may need different information or a different cadence than remote employees.

How often would you like to receive communications from [Qualtrics] on COVID-19? Overall

Employees Working Remotely

Employees Working On-site

Communications: What employees want to know

Beyond the frequency of communications it's important to understand exactly what employees want to know more about and then mobilize those messages to all corners of your organization.

What additional information can we provide?

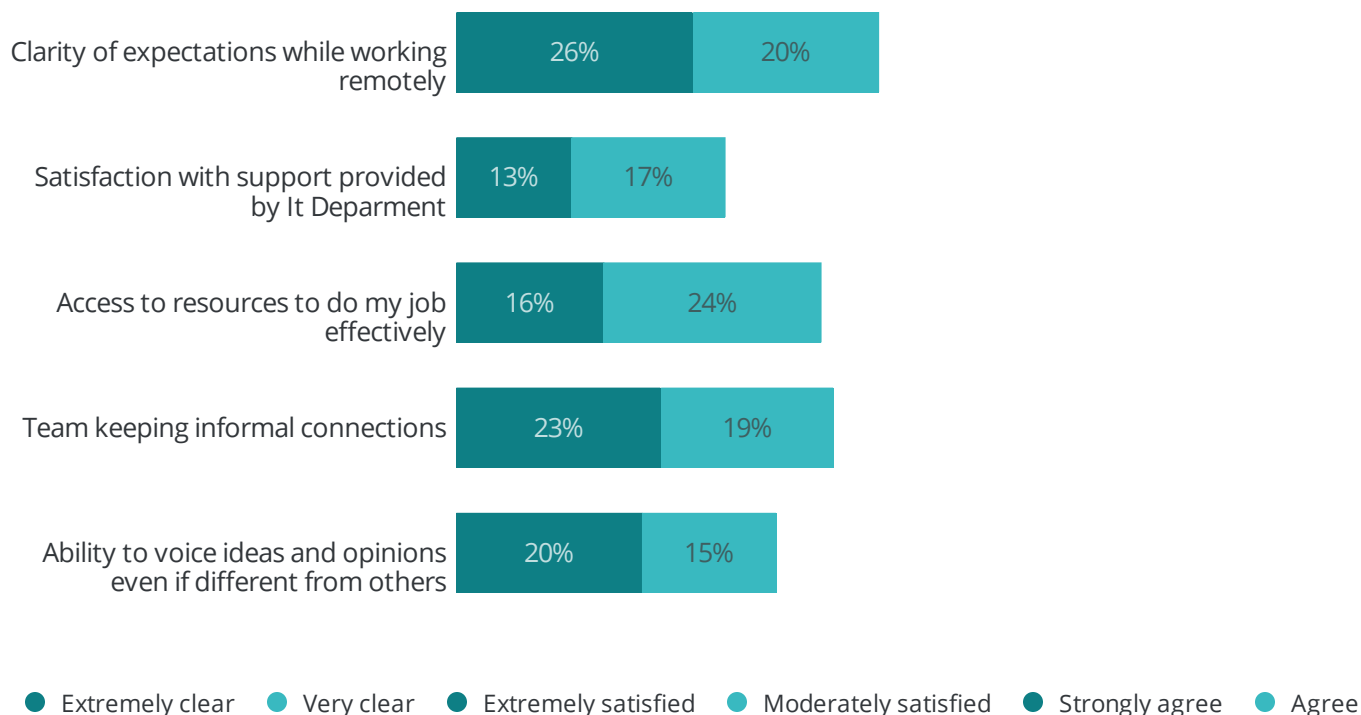

Responses to Other: Please specify...

Remote Work Enablement

Managers need to keep in touch with the needs of remote employees and take actions to help them feel supported, understand expectations while being remote, keep connected, and add their voice.

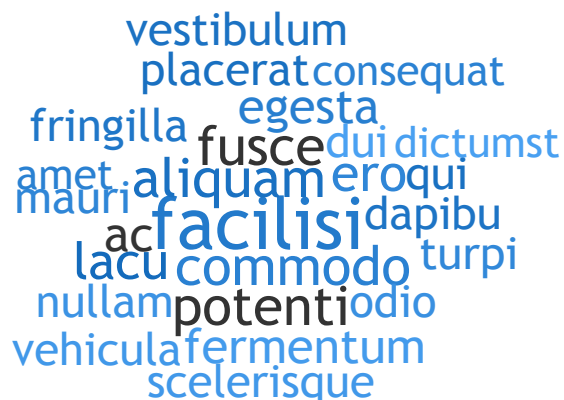

Note: The items above have been shortened to display on this page of the report, to see the full item text and results distribution go to the "All Results" pages later in the report.

Top Barriers Facing Remote Employees

Biggest challenges you anticipate you will have in meeting your customers' needs:

On-site Safety

Take immediate steps to protect your workforce: make sure that on-site employees understand and apply the required Health and Safety procedures and understand the distribution of needed PPE to do work safely.

- Extremely confident
